FeaturesDigital video capabilities can be incorporated into a wide range of devices, including digital televisions, digital direct broadcast systems, wireless broadcast systems, personal digital assistants (PDAs), laptop or desktop computers, tablet computers, e-book readers, digital cameras, digital recording devices, digital media players, video gaming devices, video game consoles, cellular or satellite radio telephones, so-called "smart phones," video teleconferencing devices, video streaming devices, and the like. Digital video devices implement video compression techniques, such as those described in the standards defined by MPEG-2, MPEG-4, ITU-T H.263, ITU-T H.264/MPEG-4, Part 10, Advanced Video Coding (AVC), the High Efficiency Video Coding (HEVC) standard presently under development, and extensions of such standards. The video devices may transmit, receive, encode, decode, and/or store digital video information more efficiently by implementing such video compression techniques. Video compression techniques perform spatial (intra-picture) prediction and/or temporal (inter-picture) prediction to reduce or remove redundancy inherent in video sequences. For block-based video coding, a video slice (i.e., a video frame or a portion of a video frame) may be partitioned into video blocks, which may also be referred to as treeblocks, coding units (CUs) and/or coding nodes. Video blocks in an intra-coded (I) slice of a picture are encoded using spatial prediction with respect to reference samples in neighboring blocks in the same picture. Video blocks in an inter-coded (P or B) slice of a picture may use spatial prediction with respect to reference samples in neighboring blocks in the same picture or temporal prediction with respect to reference samples in other reference pictures. Spatial or temporal prediction results in a predictive block for a block to be coded. Residual data represents pixel differences between the original block to be coded and the predictive block. An inter-coded block is encoded according

  "I'm O.K. I never imagined I would be a Democratic governor. But now I have to be." Who said that? It could be Elizabeth Gillum, the daughter of the city's first black mayor, David D. Guinn. Or it could have been her older sister and the mayor's wife, Casey. Such humility is not entirely surprising. After all, as hard as it may be to imagine, this family from her mother, Barbara Rae-Ellis, could be her own. In fact, the roots of the prominent Guinn clan stretch back more than a century, to when the family's first onetime "slave" was freed after a man named David D. Guinn bought her from a plantation owner who was bidding for her at a courthouse auction. "I think there is always something special about that," said State Representative Darryl Rouson, a St. Petersburg Democrat and a close friend of Ms. Gillum. "She remembers the origins of who she is from one of the people who was able to free one." It's the legacy that Ms. Gillum hopes to take forward in her own hand. Last week, she became the leader of Florida's soon-to-be-routed Democratic Party, taking the helm from her party in a party state, a position expected to inform her policy agenda in Tallahassee and before the Legislature — possibly even, she says, the party for president in 2020. The run for that nomination

Q: How to set TextBox add a text bracket no earlier than next input I try to set a textbox right under the another textbox.when typing text,the textbox below will show brackets like below (the numbers are place holders). .1 .2 After clicking submit button,all brackets would disappear. (I'm not sure if this really be a nice design.any more better way to do it?) Question : How to set TextBox Add a text bracket no earlier than next input? Thanks. A: You can set the arrow key so that the cursor moves when you press a key, and don't allow the user to insert anything when entering the text field. This seems to be the "best" design.
