One day, Reina receives a Facebook message from a very attractive boy named Ken who says he is looking for a partner. Reina answers his questions and finds out that he is blind to the point that he even cannot see his own hand in front of his face. In fact, Ken is the one who has been trying to find a partner. He is very lonely and often wishes to talk to someone. She is drawn to Ken since he is so shy. With her heart broken by her best friend Ayano, Reina decides to take up the role of Ken's partner. As the two of them become closer, Reina starts to feel that she is the reason behind Ken's loneliness. The Great Houses of the Starfinder RPG are not some mere man-made civilisations; they are living, breathing beings who work every day to fulfill their own interests and prejudices. And when that job is complete, they vanish. The huge sector dominated by these Houses can be usefully divided into Princes, Vassals, and Puppets. Principals are full-blooded members of the elite class; their background grants them proximity to power and influence, and the privilege of such a lofty position. However, the princes do not share their subjects' utter loyalty. If nobles were to lead a revolution against the princes

TYTO Ecology is a sandbox survival game. Players are faced with balancing the needs of the land and of the creatures inhabiting it. The ecosystem determines what happens on the land. The ecosystem is always changing. If the balance is tipped too far in one direction, a cataclysmic event may occur that can destroy everything. Features:

- An 8x8 landscape - Tyto Ecology is designed for players who like to run very long games, very short games, or on the fly "jam" sessions.
- A community game - There is a Tyto Ecology community on Facebook at This means that players can play with others, invite new players to join their colony, and even recruit for matches and jams, so the more players the better.
- Landscape balance - Tyto Ecology is a sandbox game, not a simulation. The player is in control of all aspects of the ecosystem and can manipulate it however they want. The player gets to determine the size and direction of the colony and if the colony is to be successful or not.
- Meets the needs of both the land and its inhabitants - Tyto Ecology is a hybrid simulation where you have a permanent population but you can use up some resources temporarily. The resources should be preserved, so you have to control the populations of animals to make sure they don't eat into them or eat too much of them before you get the next crop of resources.
- A large variety of species that can be combined to make new species - Almost any species can be created from any of the existing ones, and many of the existing ones have a wide range of functions and behaviors. For example, you can combine a baboon and a dog and have a new species that is able to catch and eat smaller animals.
- Two seasons - Spring and Fall. Both seasons are beautifully crafted. Each has its own ecology, but can affect the other.
- Endings - All players will experience a different ending each time they play. The only requirement is that you don't have any colony members die in combat.
- Unique species and blends - 16 unique species are included from 6 different avian and mammal families, and 3 unique mixes are included.
- 9 flower species, 14 plant species and 19 species of weeds, 10 grain crops, 9 honey plants and 3 lichen species.
- 30 object types
- Can cross pollinate
- Can catch, eat and spawn
- Can

Found this thread on the UMasser game forum, and I was wondering if anyone would be willing to provide comments here. And of course, if you have a good deal of info on gameplay or gambling mechanics or anything else, also, that would be very helpful. I'll be totally honest, more than likely none of you even know or have played this, so I figure this would give me no experience loss or anything by using your advice. Chancie of getting a token on normal battles: 1 in 4 (technically 1 in 5 now) out of 12 or 24 battles Attempted to set up a system of insider and outsider accounts, running some personal numbers... taking things to a number like 6.1 in 10 For starters, doubling the amounts, and trying to crash the system, so it will be a long day of running that.sh file every battle... trying to find weaknesses in the how the random number generator works in the game... Having a game like this, wonder if a couple clicks on the pay table can make any money... even if you lose part of your tokens back, the pay table process should amount to roughly 1-2 more gold than the value of a token (about 6.6ish) I was messing around with it, and even if I run the pastebin file on a system that has more memory for the random number generator, it'll be a good loss. Notions of how this can be fixed are numerous. I was thinking some sort

And made available to the public in a 'pop up' exhibition, the plan covers almost all aspects of life, from personal budgets to taxation, to social security. The plan, shown at the entrance to the Casa Pacifica in the capital city Granada, is a reference document for community-based action and is intended to be used by organisations, citizens, local governments, institutions and others involved in social policy. The plan's goal is to eliminate economic and social exclusion in Andalusia by the end of 2025. According to the plan, the average income in the region is over €21,000 and around half of the population, including a third of children, is poor. Each month, the drive to eliminate poverty and extreme poverty amounts to nearly €700 million.
